The nature of EU rules: strict and detailed, or lacking bite?

Associate Professor Dr Gijs Jan Brandsma
Radboud University Nijmegen

Gijs Jan Brandsma researches European Union politics and governance. He is particularly interested in issues relating to transparency, democratic accountability, decision-making and the relationship between EU institutions and the member states.

In public debate, EU legislation is often depicted in terms of stereotypes: either as complex, detailed and burdensome, or as vague, weak and lacking bite. In this talk, Brandsma will present the first results of a new research project that analyses the contents of all EU legislation adopted from 1971 to 2023 and see which of these images is more true.
